"Snowy Ryōkan," a snow performance by Min Tanaka, will be held prior to the "Echigo-Tsumari Art Triennale 2024" to be held next summer.

In his all-white world, Ryōkan, who knew the end of the universe, longed for the springtime when he could play with his children that would come after the absolute abstraction and concrete hardship of snow. It is said that many people from far and near villages stepped across the snowy path to attend the funeral of Ryōkan, who was loved by the people.

Min Tanaka dances Ryōkan in the overwhelming snow.

In the second half, Ondekoza, a Japanese drumming group with deep connections to the art festival, will join in and reenact the "Bon Odori" that Ryōkan loved to dance with the people. Let's dance together at the end.
